The following penal codes are listed on background as to the final results of case.

Often, PC 273a child endangerment cases are connected to domestic violence incidents in the family home, but other scenarios include:

- neglect of a child's basic needs over a long period;
- drugs are left within reach of a child by their parent.

Any act that places a child in a potentially dangerous environment that may injure them can be sufficient for Penal Code 273a charges.

California Penal Code 273d PC defines the crime of child abuse as inflicting cruel punishment or a physical injury on a minor who is under the age of 18 years old. This statute is also commonly known as "corporal injury on a child," and frequently falls under the umbrella of domestic violence.

NARRATIVE STATEMENT OF JASMINEMARIE SOLLER

June 8, 2022

My name is Jasminemarie Soller, I have been asked to write this narrative of an incident that happened over 25 years ago in San Jose, CA between my ex-husband, Michael Robert Gonzales, and our 2 children, that led to my arrest.

Mr. Gonzales and I were high school sweethearts and shortly after graduation we got married in 1990. I was 18 years old at the time. As many young girls of my generation who did not even know the meaning of "domestic abuse," I was caught off guard when he hit me the first time.

The first time he hit me was when he was driving me to work. He was upset at me because I could not tell him when my work would end as I was working in the mall at the time. and raised his voice and naturally, so did I. Suddenly, out of nowhere he slapped me in the face. I was surprised and shocked. I did not say anything as I was in disbelief. At that time, I was also five months pregnant with our first son.

After that first incident, there followed more incidents with more frequency. He was short-tempered and frequently angry. He would yell a lot and just throw objects or hit things, to include hitting me.

A few months after my first son, Michael Joseph was born in April 1991, I started coaching high school volleyball on a part-time basis. We needed more money to take care of our family, so I had a few full time job interviews lined up. for one of the interviews, my ex-husband wanted to take me to the interview, and we brought our three month old baby. The plan was for my ex-husband to wait in the car with our baby, while I was in the interview. Prior to leaving for the interview, I made sure the baby was fed and changed before we left home.

The interview took longer than we had expected. When I returned to the car and looked at the baby, I noticed there was a dirty diaper in the car. Within an hour after getting home, I checked on the baby in the basinet. He was turning pale and had shallow breaths. We rushed him to the emergency room. The doctor stated that the baby had 4 broken ribs and a collapsed lung. The hospital contacted the police, and we were interviewed.

They authorities took my son to child protective services until we went to family superior court. While we were going through this process with child protective services, my ex-husband became even more abusive to me. It got so bad that our friends and my family did not want me to stay with him any longer, but of course I was young and naïve. I did not listen and was getting myself more physically hurt in the process.

On one occasion, I was readying myself for appointment for another interview, and I told my ex-husband that he did not have to drive me. At the time we had only one car that my ex-husband used to go to work and I was going to take the bus because my work location was not very far away. I was in our walk-in closet when we were having this conversation. Because I had decided that I would take the bus, he got very upset. He got so upset that he hit me so hard that he knocked me out. When I came to on the floor of the closet, I was dizzy and woozy. I found I had been drenched in soda by him with an empty 2-liter soda bottle on my side.

After the court proceedings, with child protective services my ex-husband was charged with child endangerment and child abuse. I was not. The court also ordered that I complete parenting classes and have supervised visitation before I could have my son back. My ex-husband was taken to custody. Shortly after these events happened, I found out I was pregnant again.

My ex-husband was put in jail. During the months that followed my ex-husband's incarceration, I did all that was asked of me by the court and child protective services. I secured a new job. I found a new place to stay for our home. I completed my parenting classes. I had the birth of my second son and shortly after his birth, I regained the custody of my first son. At first, it seemed and felt like an impossible task with all these requirements in front of me, with being a single parent, my poor economic situation, and expecting a second child. However, I accomplished it all and was proud of what I had been able to accomplish.

For a short while, approximately four months in 1992 everything was going well. I was employed, the child care for my sons was being handled by my roommate and my parents while I was at work. We were happy. Until one evening, when I left my place to visit my parents with both of my kids in my car, I thought I saw my ex-husband walking in the direction to where I lived. But I thought I was just being paranoid and continued to my parents' place.

After leaving my parent's place, I arrived home and my roommate stated that some man had been looking for me. I ask her who it was, and she described him. No one knew where I was living except for the children's social services advocate and my family. A shock of terror came over me when she described my ex-husband. I went into panic mood. I did not know that he had been released from jail. My first instinct was to move to a new location. So, I did. I quickly within a matter of eight days moved from my second floor apartment in my apartment complex. I was able to get an apartment on the second floor that I could not only afford for me and the kids, but keep us away from my ex-husband.

Until he found us.

The social services advocate who was assigned to my first son had assisted me to receive a restraining order for my children against their father. Although, I am not sure why I was not included in that restraining order, but I was not.

In spite of my efforts, my ex-husband found out about our new location. Several times he had attempted to come over to my new apartment to the point, I was afraid to be at the apartment. I would leave extra early in the morning to drop off my kids at my sister's or parents' place. When I got back to the apartment complex I would check in with my neighbor first to see if anyone had come by, and then I would go to my apartment. There were several times when my ex-husband did come over to the apartment. I would call the police. However, by the time they arrived he had already disappeared. He would then not attempt to come back for a while, but he would always start up and try again.

One day, the kids and I came home, and my ex-husband was already there in my apartment. I had made the mistake of leaving the balcony sliding door open on our second story apartment. I was trying to find a way to call the police again, but he had already hidden the kitchen wall phone away somewhere, and back then I had no cell phone. Scared that he may do something to the kids or me, I did not say much. So, I just started cooking dinner, while I was cooking dinner, he started to watch TV. I mentioned that he could not be at the apartment too long. He told me to shut up in an aggressive voice and said that I can't tell him anything. I did not want anger him, so I stopped talking.

While I was cooking in the kitchen, my oldest son, Michael Joseph was with me in the kitchen playing with his toys. My youngest son, Vincent Timothy was in his playpen in the living room. Vincent was about nine months old and was making his usual playful noises in his playpen when, suddenly, it got extremely quiet.

I look towards the playpen and there was a comforter in the playpen. I assumed that my ex-husband had taken Vincent into the bedroom for him to sleep. So, I entered the bedroom to check on Vincent. I began to panic because he was not in the bedroom. I went back to the living room and checked the playpen once again. I lifted the comforter that was in the playpen and found that Vincent was under the comforter. He was sweating, but he was breathing. My ex-husband had put the comforter over Vincent to keep him quiet so he could continue to watch his TV show.

I picked Vincent up out of the playpen and started towards the bedroom with Vincent in my arms and my ex-husband followed us into the bedroom. I was very upset and told my ex-husband to leave the apartment. He got angry with me and he said I was overreacting. I was crying in the bedroom rocking Vincent in my arms. My ex-husband came over told me to stop crying and I was trying to tell him that it was wrong for him to do that to Vincent. Then suddenly, he grabs me by my hair and tosses me around like a ragdoll while I still had Vincent in my arms. I was yelling at him to stop. I was afraid of letting Vincent go, that he would fall and get hurt. My ex-husband kept dragging me around the room by my hair. I put my body between my ex-husband and Vincent when we were being attacked. The more I pleaded for him to stop, the harder he was pulling me around. So, I stopped speaking. He finally stopped and left the apartment.

Trying to put myself together, I checked Vincent. It seemed that he was okay. He was crying and awake. My oldest son was also crying but he was okay. No harm was done to him. After calming the boys down, I got them to go to bed and to sleep. I then cleaned up the kitchen which took me approximately 15-20 minutes to complete. I checked once again on the boys in their bedroom. I noticed that Vincent had shallow breathing. I was scared so I called a cab and asked to be taken to the emergency room.

On the drive there, I had to perform CPR on Vincent. After the doctors examined Vincent, they stated that he had shaken-baby syndrome. Somewhere through all of this, I called my parents and they met me there. Child protective services came and both my kids were taken away from me. I did not want to be at the apartment anymore, so I moved again.

One of my former high school teachers offered for me to stay with her, so I did. There was a court hearing on this matter. But only I was present as my ex-husband had disappeared and was not to be found. I was assigned by the court to go through one-on-one counseling and to attend domestic violence support group sessions which I did. I was going routinely to these sessions as ordered.

Then my ex-husband found me again. He would come around and harass me at my job and even at the place where I was staying with my former teacher. It was too much. I had to move again a fourth time. I moved from San Jose in the South Bay to Livermore in the East Bay which was approximately 50 miles away. At Livermore he did not know that my family was now there. I commuted from Livermore to my job and I still went to my counseling and domestic group sessions.

My counselor recommended that I needed to take care of myself first before trying to take care of others. I decided then to go to the Philippines where my family had originally come from and where I still had extended family. I spoke to the social services child advocates for both of my sons and that they respected my decision. I realized that I did not want my situation with ex-husband to be the life situation for my children, and that I did not want to be a domestic abuse victim anymore. I surrendered custody of my two sons and put them up for closed adoption. This was the only way I knew how I could protect them. It was the most heartbreaking thing I had done in my life.

During that time, my thought process was that I never wanted the boys to see or feel that domestic violence in our home was a normal thing. I was never going back to my ex-husband, but I believed he would never stop coming after me and my children. The social services advocate stated that the options I had for the boys were either an open or closed adoption. It was the hardest decision I ever had to make. If I chose open adoption then I would know and my ex-husband would be able to find out who the adoptive parents would be. If I chose closed adoption I would never know nor would my ex-husband know who had adopted my boys. I chose closed adoption to protect my children. Most days, especially their birthdays, is when it is the hardest for me.

After signing off on the adoption papers, I then continued with my plans and went to the Philippines and stayed with my extended family. I was there for about three months when my mother called me and stated that the police wanted to speak to me. So, I got on an airplane and came back home to America. When I came home, I decided to stay with a cousin that my ex-husband had never met.

I reported to the San Jose Police Department and I was questioned by two male officers about what happened with Vincent Timothy. I told them the whole story. They said it is a formality, but they had to take me to custody at the Milpitas facility at Elmwood. Being young and naïve, I did not realize I was getting actually being booked and arrested until I was being fingerprinted. They stated that because there was a protective order for the boys and they were with me at the time that I was endangering them. There were two counts for endangerment. Also, there was one count for abuse. I was told that the abuse charge was based that I had had Vincent Timothy in my arms when I was being tossed around like a ragdoll. I do not know if they ever arrested my ex-husband.

I had no money nor did my family have any to hire my own attorney. I was assigned to the public defender's office to represent me in court. My first public defender was a female lawyer who represented me at first. Then for some reason she left and I was then assigned a male public defender. I was in jail without any bail.

After eight months in jail my second public defender recommended that I should take the plea the District Attorney was offering which was "No Contest." He also stated that if the case were taken to a trial and we lose, I could be sent to prison from 25 years to life. I contacted my parents to help me with this decision. They agreed I should I take the plea deal because they wanted me home after such a long time in jail

After I agreed to a plea of No Contest, my public defender said I did not have to appear in court for the last three courts sessions that later followed. When the public defender came to see me after the last court session, he stated that the court accepted our No Contest plea. Since I have never gotten in trouble before and had not received any demerits while I was in custody, the judge ruled I be released with time served on my own recognizance. The court process took a little over 9 months.

With the court's decision, after my release, I was assigned probation for 3 years. It started off with visiting the assigned probation officer every 3 days, then every week, then every 2 weeks, then 3 weeks, then monthly. I was also tasked to go to domestic violence support group sessions. I went to Next Door Solutions in San Jose which held the group session. I am grateful for all the people who worked and attended this support group. It is a great organization. For those three years, I completed all tasks assigned by the probation officer and completed my probation.

When all this started happening, I was 19 years old. I was in love with the idea of love and believing in the traditional ways of being together for better or worse. I lost myself in the process. When I gave the boys up for adoption, it was the way out for them to live a life without violence being the norm and I still pray that they have a good happy and healthy life. As for me, I had to come to terms with the life that was dealt to me. I have had an uphill battle to believe in myself, that I am not a permanent victim, and to be confident again. I am there! I am happy. Grateful my children are in a much better place, are happy and in a safe environment.

It has been over 30 years and since all of these events then, I do my best to be a decent human being, bring smiles or laughter to someone every day, be a positive role model and be of service to my community. I have become a stronger person and have come to terms with my decisions and outcomes. I am doing the work and continue to work daily to improve in many facets of my life.

In order to supplement my statement and provide you with the supporting documents and court records you requested I contacted the Santa Clara County Probation Office and the officer who answered the phone stated they only keep records for only 5 years in their office. He directed my call to Record Clearance.

At Record Clearance, I spoke to Officer Flores. She accessed my records and said she sees only partial information. This is due to their office having transitioned from hard copy to electronic records. As they entered hard copy records into their new electronic system, she indicated they may have not entered all the information because it was too old and that my file had been inactive for quite some time. She said, unfortunately, she is unable to generate any document as needed due to insufficient historical information in their system. That will be the extent of what she can do for me from her office.

Officer Flores stated to me that my next step to get my information you requested is to go to the Public Defenders office to see if they may have copies. On May 2, 2022, I was told by attorney Linda Verasco that she looked me up in all their databases and they do not have any of my records anymore and there is nothing they can do. All they have is the charge and it did not say felony or misdemeanor. She suggested I in turn that I contact the expungement department to see if I qualify for their expungement program. I completed the expungement application and I do qualify to be represented by the Public Defenders office for the expungement program. My letter from their office is attached with this narrative.

It is my hope that anyone looking at my statement will look at it in its totality of the last 30 years and not at a space of a few years in my teens. You will see there are no subsequent criminal matters up to the present day. I believe I have paid any and all dues. Perhaps I might wish that there had been a better domestic abuse support back then, but life is what it is and one has to move on. In moving on, I present to you my list of accomplishments to draw a more accurate and fuller picture of me as a person and a productive member of society. :

It is my passion for this industry in making people feel better on my table or chair plus the privilege to educate the future of our industry is the most rewarding part when witnessing their transformation in their Health and Wellness Outcomes for my clients. TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

RE: Jasminemarie Soller

This letter certifies that Jasminemarie ("Jasmine") Soller was the Massage Therapy Director/Instructor when I served as the Campus Director at Institute for Business & Technology ("IBT") from July 11, 2016 to June 30, 2020.

She had been serving in the capacity since before my tenure there, beginning in October 23, 2003.

In her role as a Program Director, she had overall responsibility for the massage therapy program including design and implementation of the curriculum, equipment acquisition, coordinating with vendors, facilitating program advisory committees, liaising with other departments, hiring, training and supervising instructors, developing externship sites, as well as facilitating the testing/certification of students.

As an instructor, she provided training in all the courses of the program including Fundamentals of Massage Therapy; Asian Theory & Eastern Practices; Business Professional Development, Ethics and Law; Clinical, Sports and Special Populations; and Day Spa and Wellness.

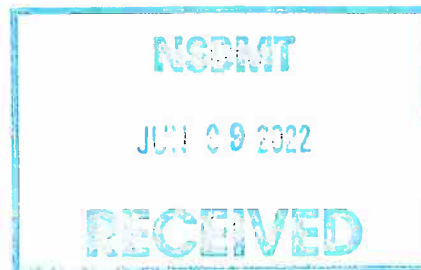

When IBT decided to phase out the program, its sister-school, Advanced Training Institute ("ATI"), where I now serve as a Campus Director, decided to introduce the program and, since September 2020, Jasmine was instrumental in organizing the Program Advisory Committee and developing the enhanced program (to include Reflexology) for approval by its accreditor, ACCET. She has also served as volunteer for ACCET where, as a subject matter expert on massage therapy, she has visited throughout the nation to ensure compliance with accreditation standards.

If I can be of further assistance, please do not hesitate to contact me.
